Cobb, Hailed as Greatest Player in History, Mourned by Baseball World

IS NOTED BY FRICK

Cobb Called Link Between Old and New-Mantle, Stengel Pay Tribute

The world of baseball yesterday mourned the death of Ty Cobb, hailed by many as the game's greatest star and acknowledged by all as its fiercest competitor.

From the top officials of baseball, oldtime team-mates and opponents, modern players and fans came the same phrases ... "a great player" ... "the best of all time" . . . "a legend in American sports" . . . "an inspiration to all."

Cobb was called by Commissioner Ford Frick a "great baseball player who was representative of a competitive spirit that must be continued if baseball is to continue."

Frick said the death of Cobb "marks the passage of one of the few remaining links between the old and the new."

"We have many baseball players," said Frick, "but very few Ty Cobbs. He belongs with the Ruths, Mathewsons, Alexanders and Johnsons of a golden TY COBB, 74, DIES;

George Weiss, the president of the New York Mets, said: "There was no denying that Cobb stood alone as a baseball player, undoubtedly the greatest of all.

Tigers owe more to Ty Cobb than either of them ever will be able to repay, regardless of players."

Dean Pays Tribute

we've lost the greatest." had admired Cobb from the time they met in 1934.

season there is no reason why at bat. you can't win thirty games His first-year batting averevery season.'"

Ty Cobb "the most sensational fell below .322. Three times, of all the players I have seen he batted more than .400 in a in all my life." "By sensational," Stengel 429 times at bat.

elaborated, "I mean he surplayers."

Stengel recalled once seeing Cobb tag up and score from third on an infield pop-up. "He pitcher," said Stengel.

great first baseman, recalled have averaged under fifty that Cobb was a fighter on the steals a season. field, "but to me he went out Several times Cobb stole secplayed against Cobb with the ning. One manager reportedly old St. Louis Browns.

"He was a good friend of mine, and I consider him a fine man and gentleman," Sisler breaks for second?"

Mantle Recalls Visits

a twilight-night double-header win its third straight American against the Orioles, said: "I'm sorry to hear it. He used It was not only his ability too close or too far away from to survive. me two or three times."

said Stan Musial, the St. Louis played every game as if it were peated thrills and excitement. bigger-chested, older members Cardinals' star. "He was a great the deciding contest in the In the off-season of 1920, he baseball figure, a great credit world series. to the game. He always followed At the height of his career which he had starred for so tary service during World War Brandt, Baltimore seriously challenged his im- a bout under the stands. mortal records.

Yankees:

Records Cobb Shares

Most years batting .400 or better his personality. -3 (also held by Rogers Hornsby and Jess Burkett).

Honrsby and Burkett). Most years playing 100 or more few intimates, he seemed in his Dutch Leonard, a former Tiger was given to Cobb by Grant-Robinson, Cinc. Wagner and Tris Speaker). Most times five hits in a game for his long period of aggres- ment to throw a game in 1919 who was impressed with the in one season-4 (also held by siveness. Willie Keeler and Stan Musial). Most home runs in two consecutive games-5 (also held by six to make jokes about his days cago. others).

1905 -----

1905..... 1907 150

1908

1910

1911 1912

1913 122

1914 97

1915 156

1916 145

1917 152

1920 112

1927 134

TOTAL 2,033

phia Athletics in 1927 and 1928.

1918 1919

1921

1922 1923

1924

1925

1926

Cobb: Daring on the Baselines and Skilled at Bat COBB OFTEN WENT

Ty Cobb, who was noted for deadly use of his spikes against opposing basemen, was not afraid to risk his own skin. In this play, he braved Jimmy Austin's spikes in a 1909 game.

Continued From Page 1, Col. 4 "Baseball and the Detroit numerous records include the following:

Highest career batting averthe well-deserved honors heaped age (.367); most batting chamupon the greatest of all Detroit pionships (twelve); most stolen bases (829).

During fourteen of his years Dizzy Dean said, "We've lost in the major leagues, he batted a lot of great ball players. Now when the old "dead" ball was still in use and when there was The former pitcher said he virtually no limit on the tricks a pitcher could use.

"I was just a young guy Cobb started with Detroit on then," said Dizzy, "and I re-Aug. 30, 1905, at the age of 18. member the first time he saw The Tigers had paid between me pitch. He called me over $700 and $750 to get him from after the game and said: 'You Augusta in the South Atlantic can be great, kid. If you can League, Cobb hit a double off win thirty games in a regular Jack Chesbro in his first time age was .240 for forty-one Casey Stengel, the former games but from then until he New York Yankee pilot, called called it quits in 1928 he never season. He had 4,191 hits in 11,-

Batting left-handed prised all his opponents. He throwing right-handed the cenwould shock them with start-ter field star played in 3,033 ling base-running plays and he games, scored 2,244 runs, hit could always outhit any oppo-297 triples and nine times made nent, even if they were great more than 200 hits in a season. In 1915 he stole ninety-six bases.

Nine Homers in 1909

A master of the hook and just waited until the infielder fall-away slide, Cobb raised Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, gengot ready to throw to the base stealing to a height it has never regained. The league greatest baseball players of George Sisler, the former champions since Cobb's time all time:

of his way to be nice." Sisler ond, third and home in one inasked his catcher:

"What do you do when Cobb

The catcher replied: "I throw to third."

Cobb was once home-run Mickey Mantle of the New champion of his league. He hit York Yankees, in Baltimore for nine in 1909, helping Detroit League pennant.

to come see me in the dugout that inspired fear and respect was a habit of his to attend when he visited New York and in his foes, but also the temp- many of the old-time affairs er of his playing. He once said and reminisce. kid, let me show you what on the diamond was that he hikes and to go hunting for the plate. He must have helped Often called the "stormy and quick awareness. petrel" of the game, as well As a manager, as well as a "Sorry to hear about Ty," as less printable epithets, he player, Cobb gave the fans rethe game closely, even when he was frequently embroiled in long. He brought the Tigers was no longer directly connectifights with other players and ed with it."

Which he had starred for so long. He brought the Tigers home second in 1923, but that with fans. In 1912 the Tigers was his best.

Which he had starred for so long. He brought the Tigers home second in 1923, but that with fans. In 1912 the Tigers was his best.

Which he had starred for so long. He brought the Tigers home second in 1923, but that with fans. In 1912 the Tigers was his best.

Division and served overseas. Said Roy Hamey, the general went on strike because he was manager of the New York suspended for attacking a heckler who happened to be a opposition to distraction by jog-

In his later years Cobb be-still batting .339 when he recame a "mellow sort of fellow," signed as manager in 1926. in the words of a man who knew him and was impressed with the apparent turn-about in

212

143

SB.

Cobb's Career Batting Figures

United Press International and In 24 years in major leagues, Cobb averaged .367 at bat

How Career of Cobb Compared With Ruth's

Following is a statistical comparison of the careers of erally acknowledged as the e	an time:

y	COBB	RUTH
1	Years 24	22
	Games3,033	2,502
-	Career average367	.342
-	Batting champion-
y	ships 12	1
۱'	Highest average420	.393
ь	Runs scored2.244	2,174
b	Hits4,191	2,873
	Home runs 118
-	Triples 297
ı	Doubles 724
_	Total bases5,863
П	Runs batted
t	in, career1,901	2,209
t	Most runs batted	-1-50
n	in, season 144	170
"	Stolen bases 892
- 1

"He'd tell me 1 was standing when a player had to be tough his playing years he credited with developing his endurance signed to manage the team on evolve strategy. But he was Accused of 'Fix' Agreement

Where as a player he had ened to become another "Black Beverly McLauren and Shirley Maris, New York 84 | Cash, Detroit Most consecutive years batting battled with his own team- Sox" affair. With Tris Speaker, Cobb, all of California, and his Gentile, Baltimore 82 Killebrew, Minn. 72 .400 or better-2 (also held by mates as well as with opposing another of baseball's old-time first wife. team members, and had only a heroes, he was accused by later years to want to atone pitcher, of figuring in an agree- land Rice, the sports writer, Mays, San Fran.

> Cobb said at once he felt Peach. The name stuck. "honor bound" to put in at least one more "big year."

Connie Mack signed him for .240 the Athletics for a reported .322 $75,000, and Cobb promptly .350 predicted a pennant. But Mack's 377 line-up of stars—he had signed .385 Eddie Collins and Zach Wheat .420 as well—lost to the Yankees .410 that year. Cobb never had an-390 other chance to be on a pen-370 nant winner. He played in .371 ninety-five games in 1928, bat-.383 ting .323, or 44 points below .382 his career average.

Waspish as he was on the 389 field, Cobb was a quiet man .401 away from the diamond. Known .340 to have invested his money .338 wisely, he became a millionaire, largely on the investments he .339 largely on the investments he After he left the game as a player he rarely went to a ball Played with Detroit from 1905 through 1926 and with the Philadel. park. He insisted that the game that he had played in the era of the fast, multiple steal, the nouncer. "Do you really think squeeze bunt and the dead ball that is all the great Cobb could was not matched in contemporary baseball. In recent years Cobb had he's 72 years old."

been relatively inactive. In November, 1953, he donated a WORLD TRACK MARK SET reported $100,000 to establish the Cobb Educational Foundation for promising Georgia New Zealand Team Timed in students.

Cobb, who never went to colege, sought to give scholarto the students selected.

Front Row, Left

dicated, however, that of the Snell, whole squad of unsmiling youngsters, the half-pint with the torn stockings sitting at "He would say 'Come here, that the reason he was so tough He continued to take long the torn stockings sitting at in 1959. A British team finished to be show you what on the diamond was that he bikes and to see hunting for the left end of the front row second to New Zealand in had entered baseball in the days many years, activities that in the picture worth reprinting.

In the majors, Cobb's weight varied from 178 pounds to 192. But in boyhood he was a slim, jittery nobody, dwarfed by the of the Midgets. . Cobb was one of the first major leaguers to get into mili- Howard, New York

Division and served overseas. manager, Cobb drove fans and opposition to distraction by jog-

Yankees:

"Ty Cobb, of course, was a cripple. In another famous ging back and forth from center field to talk to his pitcher, feats were such that nobody has George Moriarty, an umpire, in a bout under the stands.

Opposition to distraction by jog ging back and forth from center field to talk to his pitcher, thirty-nine years of marriage. Robinson, Cincing Shift his infield, or otherwise about under the stands.

Opposition to distraction by jog ging back and forth from center field to talk to his pitcher, thirty-nine years of marriage. Robinson, Cincing Moon, Los Angele Moon, L In 1955, Cobb divorced his Mays, San Francisco 88 second wife, Mrs. Frances Cass pinson, Cincinnati

Those who were with him Boyer, St. Louis Wills, Los Angeles Soon afterward he figured in when he died included his son, a potential scandal that threat-James; his daughters, Mrs.

The nickname Georgia Peach Cepeda, San Fran. 81, Aaron, Milwaukee 66 the year of the crooked series daring, talented youngster in Maris, New York 35 | Cash, Detroit In a soft-spoken way he liked between Cincinnati and Chi-action with Augusta. After Mantle, New York 33 Colavito, Detroit 24 watching Cobb, Rice went back Killebrew, Minn. 27

TO BAT FOR COBB

At 17. He Flooded Grantland Rice With Self-Praise

When Ty Cobb was 17 years old, he played for a baseball team in Anniston, Ala. Grantland Rice was the sports columnist of The Atlanta Journal.

Rice began getting a flood of mail from many Southern towns, all with different handwriting and different names but all with the same theme:

"Watch this fellow Ty Cobb He is going places with his hiting and fielding."

Finally, Rice ran a paragraph n his column about young Ty cobb. Cobb confessed to Rice years later that he had written all the letters.

"I wanted to get my name in his column," Cobb told the North American Newspaper Allaince. "My father read it regularly, and he would think I was making good."

One spring with the Tigers, Cobb noticed a rookie who was entertaining the players with tremendous broad jumps. The youngster had been a college broad jump star. Cobb challenged the rookie and couldn't come within six inches of him. Two weeks later he challenged the youngster again and beat

"No punk is going to outjump me," United Press International reported Cobb as say-

What Cobb didn't say was that he had practiced secretly for two weeks.

In an Old-Timers game a Yankee Stadium in 1947, Cobb expressed concern about swinging a bat. He hadn't touched one since 1928, he complained.

"I'm way out of practice and I sure don't want to hit you when I swing," he said solicitously to the rival catcher, Benny Bengough. "Better move back a bit so you don't get hurt."

Bengough unsuspectingly obliged. Cobb bunted the first pitch and beat it out for a single while the red-faced Bengough huffed and puffed trying to catch up with the ball.

Two years ago an old-time major league player was interviewed by a broadcaster. "What do you think Ty Cobb would bat today under modern conditions?" the player was asked. "Oh, about .305 or .310," was the laconic reply. "Only .305 or .310," exclaimed the astonished an-bat today?" "Well, replied the old-timer, or more seasons-.367. you have to remember that 16:23.8 for 4-Mile Relay leagues—3,033.

DUBLIN, July 17 (UPI)—A ships to students interested in New Zealand team, including higher study. His father had two Olympic champions, broke wanted him to become a lawyer the world record tonight for the or physician instead of a ball-four-mile relay. It won in 16 hits-8. player. The foundation provided minutes 23.8 seconds in a track outright gifts rather than loans and field meet before 10,000 at Santry Stadium.

Running on the record-breaking quartet were Gary Phili-Cobb was playing baseball pott; the Olympic 5,000-meter when he was 9 years old. A pic-champion, Murray Halberg; ture of the Royston (Ga.) Midg-Barry Magee and the Olympic ets, taken in 1895, hardly in- 800-meter champion, Peter

The time broke the record of 16:25.2 set by a Hungarian team would be the only one to make second to New Zealand in

Major League Leaders By The Associated Press. BATTERS (Based on 175 or more times at bat.) AMERICAN LEAGUE

RUNS BATTED IN

HOME RUN HITTERS

as a "difficult player," and it stars were exonerated by Judge one dramatic play made by the stars were exonerated by Judge one dramatic play made by the Kennesaw Mountain Landis, and lad he called the Georgia Robinson, Cinc. 25 Kennesaw Mountain Landis, and lad he called the Georgia Last night's National League games not

TWO OF BASEBALL'S GREATS: Babe Ruth clowned with Ty Cobb, his foremost rival for baseball glory.

Sports of The Times

By JOHN DREBINGER

The Cobb We Knew

T WAS not by accident or whim of choice that when they held the first poll for L baseball's Hall of Fame in 1936, the name of Tyrus Raymond Cobb led all the rest. To be on top had been the only creed by which the Georgia Peach had lived through all the years of his spectacular-and at times turbulent-career.

His one goal was to win by any means the rules allowed. That, of course, got him into no end of fights. On and off the field the Georgia firebrand conducted countless feuds.

Even mild-mannered Eddie Collins, a great second baseman in Ty's heyday as a daring base-stealer, confessed to us once that he had harbored a burning hatred for Cobb. Eddie used to go on hunting trips, but just for the exercise. He hadn't the heart to shoot a sparrow.

"But when that Cobb came sliding into me with those gleaming spikes, I saw red," said Eddie. "Throwing to first for a double play, I must have tried to nail him between the eyes with the ball 100 times. But so agile was that demon in twisting out of reach I never got him once."

They Paid Back

But Cobb didn't do all the spiking. He was sitting in a hotel room a few years after he had hung up his spikes for good when the talk got around to some of his more reckless exploits on the base paths.

"Yes," he admitted, "I guess I may have been a trifle rough. But take a look at this." With that he rolled up his trousers and revealed a pair of shins criss-crossed with myriads of scars from ankles to knees.

"I didn't get those playing tiddlywinks," said Ty. "They gave it to me as hard as I gave it to them. The only difference was I never gave them the satisfaction of hearing me squawk. I'd sooner let them cut out my tongue than let them know I was hurt." It was when the opposition was at its roughest and hostile crowds rode him hardest that he rose to his greatest heights as a player. Such was one memorable day at the Polo Grounds in 1920. A few days before, the Yankees, who then made their home in the Polo Grounds, were playing the Indians. Carl Mays, a pitcher with a deceptive underhand or "submarine ball" delivery, was on the mound for the Yankees. A stray pitch struck Ray Chapman, a Cleveland infielder, in the head. He died without regaining consciousness. The next day, Cobb, whose Tigers were playing elsewhere, was quoted as saying Mays had done it deliberately and should be driven from baseball. The New York fans and press rallied to Mays' support.

One of His Biggest Thrills

Cobb and his Tigers followed the Indians into New York and for the first game a capacity crowd packed the Polo Grounds. For more than an hour before game time they waited for Cobb. But throughout the pregame practice there was no Cobb.

Then, just as the umpires were getting ready to start the game, the clubhouse door in center field opened. Down the steps trotted the Georgia Peach. Up the middle of the field he marched, jauntily slapping his thigh with his glove, while the crowd jeered and booed with deafening noise. Unmindful of it all, Cobb strode to the press box, then in the front of the lower stands directly behind home plate. He doffed his cap with a mock bow. Then he walked to his dugout where he gave the outraged gathering a final salute of utter disdain.

Associated Press Ty Cobb

He played it to the hilt

This done, the game started and the great Ty all but tore it apart with bat and glove. On his final hit the crowd gave him a standing ovation. You simply had to admire the

"Yes," he said years later, "I guess you could say that was one of my biggest thrills.

A Severe Taskmaster

There was, however, another side of Cobb's play that, perhaps, was not so well known and certainly not as much publicized. It was a side to which modern players could well pay close heed.

He was perhaps one of baseball's keenest students and at all times his own severest critic and taskmaster. He studied every type of batting form and mastered them all.

If any pitcher bothered him with a certain pitch, Cobb would be out early the next day wearing out his own batting-practice pitcher as he worked on that pitch over and over again. It was the same with his fielding. He had, of course, a wealth of natural talent, but he insisted on attaining perfection in all phases of the game.

"If I have any criticism of the modern player," he once said, "and I guess that could apply to my day as well, it is that so few will practice what they can't do. If a fellow can hit a long ball, that's all he tries for. He won't have any part of learning how to bunt or stroke a ball to the opposite field. My advice to young players is, work at what doesn't come easy to you."

It was a formula that kept him on top for close to a quarter of a century with an incredible lifetime batting average of .367.

Arthur Daley, who regularly writes Sports of the Times, is on vacation.

SWIM RECORD BROKEN Records Held by Cobb

Highest batting percentage, ten Jastremski Timed in 1:09.8 in Most years leading league in batting-12. Most consecutive years leading in batting-9. Most years batting .300 or better Toledo bettered the listed world Most games played in major

Most times at bat-11,429. Most runs scored-2,244. Most hits-4,191. Most singles-3,052.

Most years leading league Most years 200 or more hits-9. Most times five or more hits in one game-14, Most stolen bases--892.

Most stolen bases in one season Most total bases-5,863.

Most triples-297.

Evansville Jaycees swimming meet.

1:09.8 in last night's final. The record of 1:11.5 was set by viet Union in 1957. The 20-year-old Jastremski also set a world record on Saturday, swimming the 200-meter breast-stroke in 2:35.3.

Jastremski, who will be junior at Indiana University next fall. was timed in 1 minute 10 seconds in the morning trials and

100-Meter Breast-Stroke

(AP) - Chet Jastremski of record for the 100-meter breast-

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 17

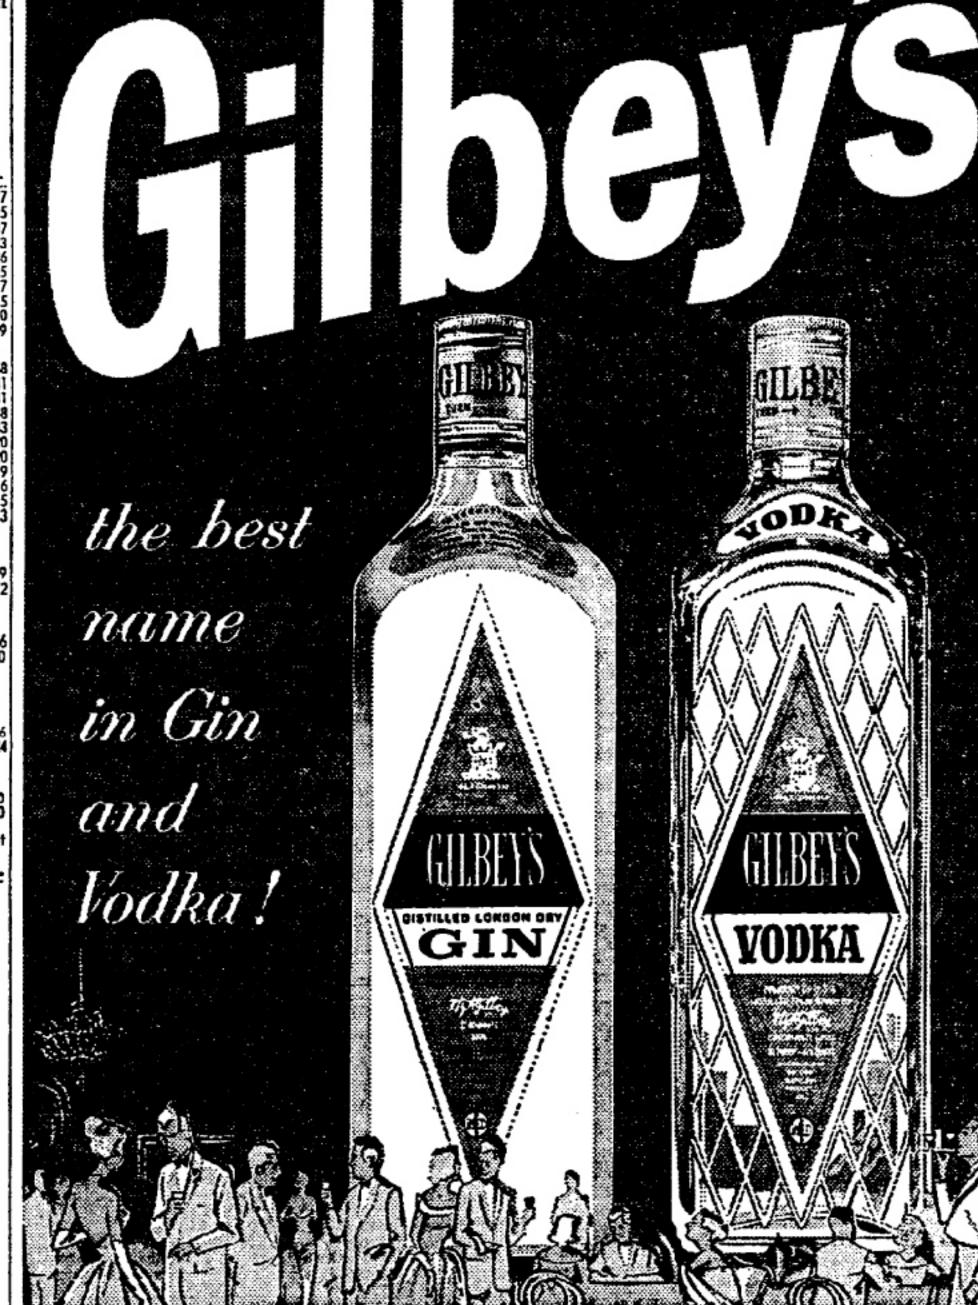

William Minashkin of the So-218 W. 46 St., West of B'way

THE ORIGINAL

stroke twice yesterday in the PRIME STEAKS & CHOPS

BRISKET CORNED BEEF MAINE LOBSTERS ROAST BABY CHICKEN KOSHER CALF'S LIVER AIR CONDITIONED

JU 2-9820

Vodka 80 Proof. Distilled from 100% Grain Neutral Spirits. Gilbey's Distilled London Dry Gin. $4.99 for either! 90 Proof. 100% Grain Neutral Spirits. W. & A. Gilbey, Ltd., Cin., O. Distr. by Nat'l Dist. Prod. Co.